

US business leader Kay Koplovitz forges new ground for female entrepreneurs

Women in science and technology are gaining a higher profile in Australia as entrepreneurs, according to Kay Koplovitz. Peter Rae

by Joanne Gray

Women in science and technology are gaining a higher profile in Australia as entrepreneurs, says Kay Koplovitz, a leading successful businesswoman in the US and founder of USA Network.

Her successful incubator, Springboard Enterprises, launched in Australia five years ago, trains women founders with potentially high-growth businesses to raise venture capital with a 12-week course and a two-day boot camp, which runs this week.

"Women are coming up with enormously important disruptive technologies in science," she said. "We're shedding a light on women who have the engineering, scientific and technology backgrounds, who can think in terms of how to deploy the technology to advance their businesses, and now they have a support system for that, which they did not have before."

Koplovitz started Springboard Enterprises in 2000 after heading President Bill Clinton's Women's Business Council, a role she says "didn't float my boat, because I am a builder. I thought what can I do with that to really advance women?"

Women founders were then receiving only 2 per cent of invested venture capital. "I decided we had to do something because we've been through too many generations where women are building business under capital starvation and I didn't think that was right."

More early-stage capital

Executive Jobs in Australia

HEAD OF A COMMERCIAL BUSINESS

Sutton Recruitment
Australian Capital Territory, Australia

Senior Project Manager \$100939 - \$108231

Queensland Government
Roma, QLD

HR Executive

Monash University
Melbourne, Melbourne Region

Chief Financial Officer

St Andrews Hospital Toowoomba
Toowoomba, Toowoomba Region

180K

Parliamentary Budget Officer

Parliamentary Budget Office
Canberra

powered by

Related articles

Uber car hire start-up bags Investec funding

Lessons in how to handle a sex scandal

Slow-clap for ScoMo's dodo legislation

Trading on past glories is not a good idea

Why a full diary is a bad thing

"If we get women to parity in raising capital for their businesses, we are going to hit the ball out of the park."

She's noticed a growth in venture capital funding in Australia.

"When I came here five years ago I was very concerned about training women to raise equity capital when there was no equity capital," she says.

Now there's about $2 billion in early-stage capital available, up from a couple of hundred million five years ago. This is still modest. Australia ranks 23rd in the world in venture capital available for investment per capita.

Springboard has so far incubated 585 businesses in the US and 36 in Australia which have raised $7 billion in total since, and there are 10 more joining the training class this year. Recent successes include Switch Automation, Myndtech, Canva, AdAlta, HealthKit and Mentorloop. Founders typically raise between $500,000 and $1 million after they complete their 12-week program with Springboard, and the success rate for later capital raisings is 80 per cent, which is four times the normal rate.

Prompted by Space Odyssey

Springboard Australia sponsors this year include EY, IAG, Microsoft, Amazon Web Services, AT&T, CSIRO and Westpac.

Koplovitz was an early disrupter. On a holiday in London as a university student in the 1960s she attended a lecture about satellites by her favourite science fiction author Arthur C. Clarke, (who wrote 2001: A Space Odyssey). "I realised here was a really disruptive technology, that we could launch other television networks. That's what gave me the idea. And I wrote my master's thesis about the potential for global communications on a scale we'd never known."

Ditching the idea of medical school, she worked in cable television which she saw desperately needed programming. She founded USA Network in 1997 and sports channel Madison Square Garden TV, with a business model of subscription and licensing she had developed. The SciFi (now SyFy) channel was launched in 1992.

"To tell you the truth, it's harder to be short in the business world than it was to be a woman, and I say it sort of humorously. But I actually did find it to be more of a challenge, people were always asking how tall you were."

Recommended

'That's a stunning Trump girl, isn't it?' and other Donald Trump...

Worry less about Donald Trump, the Steve Bannon Regency is...

The real reason why you always board a plane from the left side

How it sold: Loser at auction makes unprompted offer to...

From Around the Web

Your lender doesn't want you to refinance. Here's why.

Finder.com.au

Woman receives $1 million after being bullied

Sydney Morning Herald

Don't get trapped when super changes on 1 July

Perpetual

Why millennials are choosing shares over home ownership

ABC.net.au

APDC confirms full-year guidance, hunts acquisitions

The number one mortgage mistake
Compare Home Loans

Recommended by

Special Reports

How a capitalist dream failed in PNG

The story behind Liz Taylor's love of bling

5 luxurious but fun hotels (in pictures)

These 6 wine labels say 'pick me!'

The Canberra artist who caught John Galliano's eye

How we can avoid the Trump effect

Can this man make Australia more innovative?

Deloitte strategist's killer question

The chief marketing officers rewriting the rulebook

The secret to Atlassian's success

Perrier-Jouet's chef de cave always travels with bubbles

Why this executive prefers running at night

Want to get fit? Start with your brain

From bland mall to enticing theatre of food

What it's like to ride Tasmania's Tiger Trail

Penklis returns with Odyssey Private Equity

More consolidation tipped for industry

Big data transforming industry

Used car values to survive in new era

Driving more with less the goal

SUBSCRIBE
LOGIN

BRANDS

The Australian Financial Review Magazine
BOSS
BRW Lists
Chanticleer
Luxury
Rear Window
The Sophisticated Traveller

CONNECT WITH US

Facebook Twitter
Linkedin Instagram

FAIRFAX NETWORK

The Sydney Morning Herald
The Age
Adzuna
Domain
Drive
RSVP
Essential Baby
Home Price Guide
Weatherzone
Oneflare
The Store

MARKETS DATA

Markets Data
Australian Equities
World Equities
Commodities
Currencies
Derivatives
Interest Rates
Share Tables

SUBSCRIPTION TERMS

Digital Subscription Terms
Newspaper Subscription Terms
Corporate Subscriptions

CONTACT & FEEDBACK

About us
Our Events
FAQ
Contact us
Letters to the Editor
Give feedback
Advertise
Site Map